

Hadas Goldman

Introduction

Ladies and Gentlemen,

Now it's my privilege to introduce you to a fascinating young woman...

She was a student at one of Tel Aviv's best art schools before deciding to shift her focus from performing arts and production to social change and public service.

At 21-years-old, she and five other young aspiring artists founded Tarbut, a grassroots organization which convenes and supports artists to relocate to underdeveloped neighborhoods and communities throughout Israel, while utilizing art and culture as an educational tool to empower marginalized populations and revive towns and villages.

In 2013, she joined other young leaders and founded MAKOM, a network of communities focused on empowering and revitalizing Israeli towns and villages, through collaborative initiatives, creating a dialogue amongst diverse populations, and promoting society.

Ladies and Gentlemen, please welcome a dedicated and inspiring community leader, Hadas Goldman.

BIO

100 Words

Hadas Goldman is an Israeli actress and social activist. After completing her service in the Israel Defense Forces (IDF), she decided to shift her focus from acting to social activism, and, at 21-years-old, she and five other young aspiring artists started Tarbut, an Israeli organization that uses art and culture as an educational tool to empower marginalized populations and revive towns and villages. In 2013, she joined other young leaders and founded MAKOM, a network of communities focused on empowering and revitalizing town and villages, through collaborative initiatives, creating a dialogue amongst diverse populations, and promoting society.

50 Words

Hadas Goldman is an Israeli actress and social activist. She is one of the founders of Tarbut, an Israeli organization that uses art and culture as an educational tool. In 2013, she and other young leaders founded MAKOM, a network of communities focused on empowering and revitalizing town and villages.